

Wildlife photographer Sabina van Stralen was so inspired by her visit to one of the South African communities in which SCORE operates that she has created and produced a wonderful album documenting the happiness, pride and trust the children have for the future because of the work of organisations like SCORE.

Sabina briefly visited the Khayelitsha community in South Africa whilst on business. She was so taken by the joy and pleasure of the children as they played and participated in SCORE programmes that she drifted from the group and took lots of photographs. Once her feet were back on Dutch soil she decided to take action. Her dream was to create a photo book which showcases the positive impact SCORE's Sport and Development work is having in the community.

In March 2010 Sabina returned to South Africa, where she stayed with a host family in Mapuve, a small town in Limpopo province. She spent her time shadowing a SCORE trainer and documenting the goings on in the community with her camera. Once back in the Netherlands she made her dream come true.

The book 'Children of the future' contains over 150 A4 pages of touching pictures and very personal stories from communities in which SCORE is active. The wonderful thick cover and high quality print makes it a collector's item and would therefore make an excellent corporate gift. Sabina has decided very generously to donate a large part of the sales revenues to SCORE.

The price per book is €39.99 (discounts are available for bulk orders)
